

Employee onboarding

Bringing a new employee into a regulated fintech: the contract and checks before start, the standards from day one, the compliance training in the first weeks, and the rhythms that continue from there.

THE FLOW IN ONE LINE

Bringing a new employee into a regulated fintech rests on three pillars carried from day one — integrity, compliance, quality — through contract and checks before start, day-one standards, compliance training in the first weeks, and the rhythms that continue.

THE FRAME

Regulated environment

The staff handbook is the binding reference; this page is the sequence in practice.

The nearest leader is the primary contact from day one.

THE ROLE-SPECIFIC PLAN

30/60/90 per hire

Goals, buddy and first deliverables set by the nearest leader.

The phases

BEFORE START

Contract and checks

Contract signed, the fit & proper background check where the role requires it, equipment prepared and the staff handbook issued — the foundation in place before day one.

DAY 1

Standards and orientation

The three pillars, the working frame, professional standards, the nearest leader as primary contact, and safety orientation — set on the first day.

FIRST WEEKS

Compliance and security training

Confidentiality, insider rules, AML/ KYC, IT security and the communication duty — the rules that govern the work, covered in the first weeks.

ONGOING

The rhythms that continue

Spot checks, annual safety training, professional development, the duty to inform and the whistleblower route — the discipline that continues from there.

Before start — contract and checks

STEP	WHAT HAPPENS
Contract signed	The individual employment contract is the foundation of the employment relationship — hours, salary, any performance bonus terms all live there. The handbook supplements it, never replaces it.

Background check	Depending on the role, a fit & proper assessment may apply: criminal record extract, credit information or other relevant documentation.
Equipment prepared	Workstation and, where relevant, a company laptop. The employee carries responsibility for issued hardware from handover; company material never moves to private devices.
Handbook issued	The current staff handbook is available on the shared drive; the new employee is expected to read it thoroughly before or at start.

Day 1 — standards and orientation

- Welcome and the three pillars — integrity, compliance, quality: what they mean in daily work, and why they are existential for a regulated business.
- Working frame — office hours Monday–Friday 09:00–17:00; weekly hours per the individual contract; flexibility expected around deadlines, regulatory reporting, audits and investor meetings.
- Professional standards — dress code and professional appearance: clean and presentable, discreet on tattoos/piercings/jewellery; no ripped jeans, shorts or sportswear.
- Primary contact — the nearest leader is the first point of contact for planning, leave, wellbeing, training needs and task questions.
- Safety orientation — first-aid equipment, fire exits, evacuation routes.

First weeks — compliance and security training

The handbook mandates introduction and ongoing training in the rules that govern the work. The first-weeks block covers:

TRAINING	COVERS
Confidentiality	The heightened duty of confidentiality: internal affairs, customer and partner information — during and after employment.
Insider rules	Insider trading rules, market-abuse rules, conflicts of interest.
AML / KYC	Anti-money-laundering and counter-terror-financing prevention.

IT security	Passwords and two-factor authentication, locking workstations, e-mail and document handling, incident reporting; no company material on private devices; work primarily on the central server, not local drives.
Communication duty	Truthful, complete communication in all calls: never guess — say so and come back with verified information; no personal statements that could bind Aryze without management approval.

Ongoing — the rhythms that continue

- Spot checks — random samples of work (customer communication, transaction documentation, processes) at most every 30 days, as part of regulatory discipline.
- Annual safety training — first aid, fire drills and emergency-procedure reviews are mandatory.
- Professional development — internal programmes and agreed external courses, prioritising compliance/KYC/AML and IT security; the gross-salary scheme is available for further education such as an HD or MBA.
- Duty to inform — material changes in personal circumstances that could affect fitness for the role are reported to management immediately.
- Whistleblower route — serious concerns can be raised internally to any member of management or the board, or anonymously via the national scheme.

The role-specific plan

The handbook defines standards and training. The role-specific 30/60/90 plan — goals, buddy, first deliverables — is set per hire by the nearest leader.
